

Chairman Norma Nunn welcomed members of the Dover Ladies Luncheon Club back from the summer break. She also had the pleasure of introducing 2 New Members and 3 Guests. Following a first class three course lunch, the new season began with a talk by Anna Astin on "It's Your Duty to be Beautiful". By encouraging women to be beautiful, the government believed their morale would be high, making them healthier and thus more productive in the work place. It was interesting to look back on how women were bombarded with propaganda as they performed the most menial of tasks, such as decoking the boiler of a steam train or producing ammunition on production lines in factories. Very different times from those we enjoy today.
